A SPARKLING ENGAGEMENT WITH THE TIFFANY & CO. FOUNDATION IN HERMANN PARK

HOUSTON, TEXAS – On March 24, the bow was untied to officially unveil one of Hermann Park's finest new additions: The Tiffany & Co. Foundation Bridge. The elegant bridge is a major component of the Park's new Lake Plaza, a multi-million-dollar project officially opening to the public next month. Granting beautiful views as it arches over the lake lagoon, the bridge is sure to become a favorite spot for Park patrons.

"It is an honor to be here to officially open The Tiffany & Co. Foundation Bridge," said Fernanda Kellogg, president of The Tiffany & Co. Foundation. "Our foundation's mission to beautify open space in urban environments has been magnificently met with this elegant bridge that enhances Lake Plaza and will forever represent our successful partnership with Hermann Park Conservancy."

In support of its mission to preserve the natural heritage that distinguishes great urban centers, The Tiffany & Co. Foundation donated $1 million to Hermann Park Conservancy toward the project and the bridge that bears its name.

"We are most grateful to The Tiffany & Co. Foundation for their generous support," noted Doreen Stoller, Hermann Park Conservancy executive director. "After nearly a year of construction, we are eager to see visitors begin enjoying this wonderful new feature in Hermann Park."

While the bridge is set to receive its finishing touches before the grand opening, the dedication on March 24 was a celebration of the partnership between The Tiffany & Co. Foundation, Hermann Park Conservancy, and City of Houston. The public ribbon cutting ceremony took place at 10:30 am in the new Lake Plaza. Those present included First Lady Andrea White; Council Member Pam Holm, District G; Council Member Wanda Adams, District D; and Fernanda Kellogg, president of The Tiffany & Co. Foundation. Also in attendance were Joe Turner, director of the Houston Parks and Recreation Department; Doreen Stoller, executive director of Hermann Park Conservancy; Don Short, Hermann Park Conservancy board chair; and Sanford Criner, past board chair.

Later that day at 2:00 pm at a City Council session, Mayor Bill White presented a proclamation to The Tiffany & Co. Foundation.
